JARRATT HIGH SCHOOL

Jarratt, Virginia

Whenever we recall our happy days at Jarratt High School, our thoughts shall turn inevitably to our wonderful friend and teacher, Miss Mary Anne Jarratt. Her patient guidance of first grade pupils at J. H. S. for the past four years deserves special praise. Although she never actually taught us, she has always given freely of her time to help us with many extracurricular activities. She has been active in the P. T. A., she helped coach our Senior Play and choral speaking, aided in planning and directing various programs and parties, and performed many other services for which we are grateful. This is her last year with us. We shall be sorry to see her leave and shall miss her immensely but we wish her the best of luck in her future life. It is with deep appreciation for all she has done for us and with much affection that we dedicate this, the thirteenth edition of "The Builders" to her.

Senior Class Prophecy

In the distance were reflected flashes of lightning, but the storm was too distant to hear the thunder. It was a humid, disagreeable night and I wished for an opportunity to cool off. I got in the car and tried to stir up a little breeze. It was too hot to try to sleep, so I rode on and on.

After some time I saw bright lights and when I approached the spot I saw that a carnival was visiting the small town to which I had ridden. I can never pass by a carnival, so I parked the car and sauntered in. Perhaps, I thought, it would be cool on the Ferris Wheel, so I walked over and bought half a dozen tickets.

I had handed over my fourth ticket and had settled back to enjoy the coolness the ride afforded. As I reached the top, the wheel stopped and the whole place was a total darkness. The distant storm, I learned later, had caused the trouble. There would be no electricity until the "trouble-shooters" could find the breakdown.

Anyhow, thought I, it is cool here, but if I take a nap I might fall out, so I wondered what I could do to keep awake. The storm had moved on and the stars were beginning to show. I watched as they grew brighter and brighter and tried to locate the few that I could name.

Ancient people studied the heavens and predicted the future from a study of the stars. As they twinkled and glowed, I wished I knew what the future held for me and some of my friends.

Suddenly, one star seemed to stand out alone. It was on a door and under the star was a name. Easily I could read, LUCY NEAL, PIANIST. Just at that moment a door opened and Lucy calmly walked out and I could see her as she went to the stage of a crowded auditorium and began to play. I wasn't at all surprised for I knew that Lucy had great talent.

I stared long at the skies, hoping to see more into the future. Clouds can do funny things all right. This is what I saw that night. There was a darling little house with a picture window. In the picture window was a lovely lamp and a bowl of flowers. Beyond the flowers was Walter Harrell, bouncing a baby boy on his knee. I tried to peer further into the house, but the clouds shifted and the scene was gone.

Just then a meteor shot across the sky. It took the shape of a racer and sitting calmly at the wheel was Rylan Pritchett. I knew he could handle a school bus, but anyone could tell he was enjoying racing.

A group of stars attracted my attention. I tried to give them names and a purpose. Why did they hold my attention so if they had no meaning for me? At last I could see a face forming---it was Nancy Graham and in her hand was a ball. I understood---she will become the wonderful coach of an all-star team. Hurrah for Nancy!

Sirius, the dog star, began to shine brighter than usual. ''It is trying to tell me something,'' I thought. I concentrated hard and it was no surprise to see Vivian Harrell. There seemed to be more so I looked hard and beside Vivian I saw a beautiful horse and beyond her grassy meadows and a ranch house.

I observed a big star and a small one which seemed inseparable. I tried squinting, concentrating and all other methods, but could get no clear picture. I was about to give up when I though I heard a well known voice. It was saying, "I am so glad you won the spelling bee at your school. When I was a little girl I could spell too." We all know that was Edna Hall.

The moon, round and bright, was now shining clearly. I gazed into it to see if it could reveal the future of any of my friends. After some time I could see Louise Robbins' gentle face smiling down on all the world. I saw the picture clearly---she was a friendly and well loved teacher, the stars were her pupils.

I gazed along the Milky Way and wondered how many cows it would take to give enough milk if each star represented one gallon. To my surprise, faces began to appear, one was quite clear. It was Alton Owen at a 4-H Club Fvent and he had just arrived in a Frazer to judge livestock. Someone approached him and said, "You don't know how much we appreciate your taking time out to act as judge, Mr. Mayor."

Three young ladies were with Alton and he turned to introduce them to his friend. The first he introduced as Jean Proctor. "She is to judge the canned goods and farm products," said Alton. "Fruits are her specialty, especially Pears," he added with a twinkle in his eye.

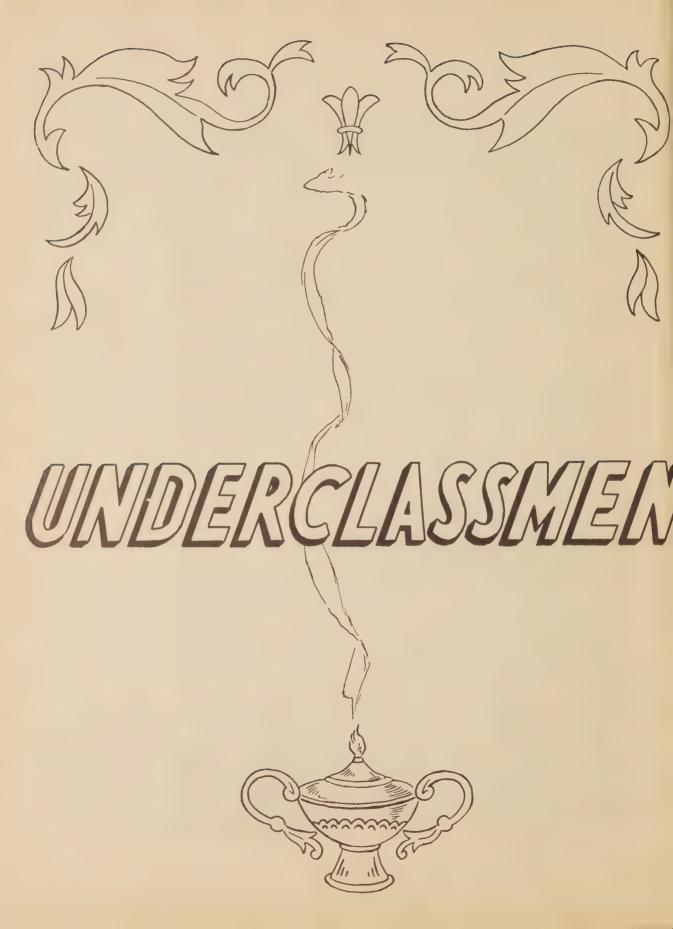

The second was Lois Starke. "She is an authority on needlework and has come to judge that," he explained. "This is our secretary to record the results of the meeting." He then introduced Emily Bendall.

A circle of stars next attracted my attention. One of the circle was a woman. From their conversation I learned that it was a town council and that Virginia Joyner was one of its most influential members.

Just then the lights flashed on and the Ferris Wheel began to revolve slowly as passengers were allowed to get off. When I reached ground once more, I felt a little dazed and still out of this world.

The owner began to offer profuse apologies and to explain that he had been helpless.

"Think nothing of it," I replied cheerfully. "I visited some of my friends ten years from now. Quite a novel experience." I went off whistling but took a backward glance just in time to see him look at me sadly and tap his finger against his head. His words which floated to me over the quiet night air were: "I hope we're not responsible for that poor guy's condition."

Girls' Basketball Team

The Girls' Basketball Team of Jarratt High School had one of the most successful seasons in many years. They started out with great enthusiasm and determination to win. They worked cooperatively with their coach, Mr. Burruss, who was always ready and willing to give them advice and show them new plays. We wish to express our appreciation to him for his wonderful services given us this year.

The first team consisted mainly of players from the eleventh and twelfth grades. Out of the eleven games played, we lost only the one with McKenney and tied one game with Dinwiddie.

During the season every player displayed good sportsmanship, which is an asset to any team.

The team will lose five outstanding players by graduation. They are: Nancy Graham, Lucy Neal, Jean Proctor, Louise Robbins, and Lois Starke.

We placed second in the final standings and met Dinwiddie in the semifinals tournament game. We lost 28-13. Christine Emory was chosen as a member of the All-Star Tournament Team, which was selected by the officials.

The high scorers were Nancy Graham, who made a total of 121 points; Barbara Carter, 117, and Betty Williams, 77. The total points for the eleven games was 350, compared to 205 for our opponents. Our guards, who played so faithfully, exhibited excellent team work throughout the games.

We, of the Annual Staff, hope that with this publication we are living up to the name of "The Builders" and are truly "building" something worthwhile. May this book be a memorial of the happy days spent at Jarratt High School, and, in years to come, may it help us relive those magis days of youth which soon are gone but are never forgotten.

The Library Club is composed of the four girls above: Doris Pair, Rosalia Janski, Edna Hall, and Anne Redman. Under the direction of Mrs. R. L. Burruss, the librarian, they are learning some of the fundamentals of library work.

All the girls perform many varied tasks. Doris checks the books in and out and keeps a record of overdue books. Rosalia files the cards alphabetically in the card catalog and mends old books. Edna is our typist. She makes catalog cards for the books and does any other necessary typing. Anne has charge of the books and magazines--keeping them returned to their proper places on shelves and racks. The girls all participate in reading and telling stories to entertain the elementary pupils, accessioning new books, helping the smaller children with difficult words and any odd jobs which happen to arise.

The club is planning to sponsor a Library Day on which they will present a special assembly program. The girls have enjoyed their work immensely and have learned many things which will benefit them in their future lives.

The Cercle Francais, in its first year of organization, consists of French I and II students. Its purpose is to aid in helping the members become better acquainted with French Language, Culture, and Customs.

We have ordered various French articles such as flags, calendars, and educational magazines to make our activities more interesting. Later in the year we are planning to present a musical operetta.

We also own an assorted collection of French Records. Some French songs which we have mastered are: "Au Clair De La Lune," "Frere Jacques," and "Cantique de Noel."

Four of our French students are planning to enter the Modern Language Tournament. These are Irene Gordon, Nagha Whitby, Edna Hall, and Nancy Graham.

Under the able sponsorship of Mrs. Burruss, the club does valuable work in furthering the study of French and is supported by many enthusiastic members.
